

CTC 5 Day Intensive Training Workshop

Creative Therapy with Adolescents and Adults

Dates: 20th – 24th Sept 10

Cost €500

This training covers a range of interventions and approaches to facilitate therapy with young clients and adults for whom talking therapy is not enough. As words are not the child's primary method of communication they can not become so for an adolescent or adult who is dealing with childhood issues. Early trauma causes the child to become stuck in some way and some part of their development remains blocked until a medium is found that can facilitate release. Therapy that is dependent on language as the primary tool can tend to reinforce the mind/body split that often results from unresolved issues. A creative medium can provide an alternative, and more effective, route to the healthy core of the client. This helps to rebuild the foundation level and empowers the client to take risks, abandon ineffective defences, experience clear emotions and reach a higher level of consciousness – in effect it assists the person in their journey towards healing and maturity.

We explore the use of sand play therapy, creative media, story-making (as assessment, therapy, and to promote coping when necessary), and a model for understanding the development of identity and how trauma interrupts this development. This will facilitate therapists in understanding how to intervene to facilitate healing with traumatised clients of all ages.

This is an eclectic, experiential training with a focus on personal development, raising awareness of the impact of creative approaches, and development of skills. A range of teaching mediums that may include lectures, role-play, small and large group work, case studies, video, discussions, use of creative media and experiential work are utilised. Certificates of attendance are presented to each participant.
